

Assistant Clinical Professor in Global Technology and Development
Arizona State University
School for the Future of Innovation in Society

The College of Global Futures leadership and its faculty embrace ASU's mission as being a comprehensive public research university, measured not by whom it excludes, but rather by whom it includes and how they succeed; advancing research and discovery of public value; and assuming fundamental responsibility for the economic, social, cultural and overall health of the communities it serves. We support and foster a culture of inclusiveness, tolerance, and respect that promotes equal opportunity and diversity among CGF faculty, staff, and students and through its engagement with diverse communities within and beyond the University.

The School for the Future of Innovation in Society invites applicants for a full-time, academic year (August 16 – May 15), Clinical Assistant Professor position to support teaching and student mentoring in the Master of Science in Global Technology and Development. The MS in Global Technology and Development (GTD) offers a global program that encompasses social, economic and political development, while highlighting the variables of technology and innovation in these development processes.

We seek to complement the current faculty in terms of development experience, areas of teaching and research, at the same time, add to the group of faculty that offer the programs' core curriculum on a regular basis. The core consists of an introduction to global development, development policies and practices, and research design and methods. The primary responsibilities would be to: teach 3 courses per semester in the GTD program, develop and revise curriculum, mentor graduate students in their applied projects, and to engage in relevant activities and collaborations within the School. There is also the potential to move into a role that includes program leadership.

Clinical professor positions are fixed-term, benefits-eligible, non-tenure eligible appointments. The anticipated start date is January 2023. Renewal is contingent on satisfactory job performance, continued availability of funding, and the needs of the academic unit and university. Candidates must reside in Arizona, or be willing to relocate, and must maintain a regular presence on campus.

Required Qualifications:

- PhD in Development Studies, Global Development, or relevant discipline by time of appointment.
- Teaching experience: Evidence of having taught at least 1 course as the sole instructor of record, and a combination of TA work and/or student mentoring.
- Relevant research agenda to the field of global development.
- Ability to communicate across disciplines and cultures: Evidence of experience living and working in different cultures, working on multinational/cultural collaborations, and/or teaching students from a diversity of backgrounds.

Desired Qualifications:

- Online teaching experience and pedagogical design/innovation
- Expertise in a world region, preferably Asia or Africa
- Global development project experience

To apply, please submit to <http://apply.interfolio.com/108670> to include the following: 1) a detailed cover letter (limited to 4 pages) summarizing the applicant's experience relevant to the advertised position; 2) a current Curriculum Vitae; 3) a teaching statement; 4) a research statement; (5) a separate statement of how the applicant's experience, activities, and vision support SFIS's and ASU's commitment to justice, equity, diversity and inclusion (JEDI) (as expressed in scholarship, education, or engagement relevant to the position) and will advance ASU's charter and commitment to inclusive excellence (limited to 2 pages)—see: https://sfis.asu.edu/sites/default/files/jedi_statement_evaluation_penult_final_pdf; Charter | Arizona State University \(asu.edu\) (6) the names, email addresses and telephone numbers of three references.

Deadline for initial review of complete applications will be August 14, 2022. Applications will continue to be accepted on a rolling basis for a reserve pool. Applications in the reserve pool may then be reviewed in the order in which they were received until the position is closed.
